SECTION C  (10 MARKS)

Read the following passage carefully and then answer the question that follows in the spaces provided in the answer booklet.

Europeans began effective exploration of the Interior of Africa after 1750. This was due to several factors which contributed towards exploration. After 1750 some educated and geographically minded young men in Europe felt that the prevailing ignorance about the Interior of Africa was a challenge to them.

Therefore, after this period these men desired to explore the interior so that they could increase their knowledge by knowing more about Africa's river system especially the Congo and Nile. They also wanted to know the botany and natural history of Africa and also the people and their way of life. Some Europeans explored the interior of Africa because they wanted to explore navigable rivers of Africa. They wanted to find the source and course of these rivers so that they could use them as a means of transport inland.

The Industrial Revolution took place in Europe after 1750. New and better machines were invented and more factories were set up resulting in an increase in the production of manufactured goods. The revolution contributed towards exploration in that it increased the demand for raw materials such as copper and palm-oil which were plentiful in the interior of Africa. It therefore crossed the Europeans desire to open up markets for their finished goods in Africa. During the Industrial Revolution better medicines and weapons were discovered. These encouraged exploration in that explorers could now be cured of tropical diseases and could easily defend themselves from hostile tribes inland.

Missionaries had wanted to abolish slave trade but they could not do so because the Africans themselves did not want to stop it. Therefore, missionaries campaigned that the best way was to colonise Africa and convert Africans to Christianity. Because of this, missionaries began to send and give financial support to missionary explorers who would recommend suitable areas in Africa where doctors and teachers could be sent for the people.

Because of the great desire that the people had to know about the interior of Africa, the African Association was formed in England in 1788. This Association had its aims. It wanted to explore the Niger river, its source, course and mouth. Its second aim was to assist and promote individuals who were willing to go to Africa to explore and publicize information about the geography, climate, vegetation and people of Africa. The Association contributed to the exploration of the Interior of Africa by sending explorers to Africa for the people's desire to increase their knowledge by knowing more about the Interior of Africa.

SECTION F (15 MARKS)

Carefully read the following passage and then answer the questions that follow in the Answer Booklet provided.

The Bushmen are believed to have been the earliest inhabitants of Central and Southern Africa. They are called by different names in different parts of Zambia. Some names include Bakafula and Mwandibonene kuli. They are generally short about 1.5 m tall and they have yellowish-brown skin. More over their language is characterised by click sounds.

The Bushmen moved from one place to another in search of food. Their diet included meat, wild fruits and vegetables. They had no knowledge of agriculture and never kept domestic animals except dogs. They lived in caves and rock shelters. They made stone tools which they used in their daily lives.

These people were good artists. They are believed to be the first people to leave works of art. Most of their earliest paintings have phased out and crumbled away. But by studying more recent ones, we can get some idea of what they were like and how they were made. These paintings must have been about important events in their life such as successful hunts or an attack by enemies.

Bushmen paintings have been found in most parts of Central and Southern Africa. In Zambia, these paintings have been found in many areas. For instance, along the Muchinga Escarpment, near Lake Mweru and between the Luangwa and Lake Malawi. Some of these paintings are not easy to understand. They show strange shapes of patterns which may have had some magical meaning for the Bushmen.
The Bushmen lived a very simple life. However, their fate came with the arrival of the Bantu speaking people. The Bantu had an advanced technology that technically put them on an advantage when it came to competition with the Bushmen. Consequently, the Bushmen were displaced from their original home lands by these superior people.
